Where the Republican Contest Is Likely to End

Sherman's Frankness and Allison' Sagacity-Goff Likely to Get the Second Place With Either Blaine or the Iowa Man.

Washington, D. C., April 10.—Senator Allison's sagacity as a politician was neatly illustrated in the debate over the coin certificate bill. Beck had made a fluent and unquestionably brilman had made a strong reply. Sherman took hold ground for gold, and his argument was by implication strongly against the double unit and consequently dozen were ready to take up the banter and do him battle. But Allison, more alert than the others, and having more at stake, threw himself into the breach of its interest in the pend

s as he roars out a strong period, selps the comprehension wonder-some of the Smart Alecks who importance to small things when stake is involved, think Allison a great stake is involved, think Allison scored a winning point against Sherman. At any rate it is conceded to be unfortunate that the Ohio Senator should have so sharply antagonized silver at this particular time. As a politician who is seeking, with almost unparalleled frankness and energy, the Republican nomination for the Presidency, it is universally thought he should have been more discreet—that he should not have been so much at pains to open an old een so much at pains to open an old reach. He should have known that olleagues are tenacious, re-essive, and that silver sentisential, aggressive, and that silver sential, aggressive, and that silver sential that he went his length, and as of old slowed himself to be easily the master of a great subject.

Senator Faulkner spoke to me in the Senator Faulkner spoke to me in the most admiring manner of Sherman's force and directness in argument, though I don't think Faulkner jibes in with what he said. He told me it was no hardship to sit three or four hours and listen to such debaters as Beck and Sherman and Allison. It was really the first real off-hand set-to of heavy-weights the new Senator had witnessed. MORE THAN A POSSIBILITY.

Sherman is no spring chicken in polities. He ought to know what is policy and what is not. But he has some very good friends who think, considering Algood friends who think, considering Al-lison's alcriness in taking advantage of him, that he blew his bugle when the occasion did not call for harmony of that kind. It is thought that Allison did a very smart thing, and all the politicians are talking about it. I have heard so much of it in my little jogging around that there must be something in it of consequence. The dawning of an idea, always an event with your correspondconsequence. The dawning of all cases always an event with your correspondent, carries such special interest in this instance that it must go out before it has taken full shape. The idea is that William B. Allison—broad, and strong and safe, if not brilliant; believer in the and safe, if not brilliant; believer in the double coin basis and sound finance; lib-eral protectionist; the favorite of Blaine; star in the western Republican firma-ment and idol of his State; Lincoln-like, rugged and plain, with billy-goat beard, and, unlike him, left-handed; round least beart, mank, not pretty by a

MAY BE BLAINE OR ALLISON Republican sentiment seems to be sugaring down to the conclusion that the nominee will be either Blaine or Allison for the first place. It is already pretty well settled that Mr. Sherman will have to divide the Ohio delegation with a ri-val, and he has said that he will not go val, and he has said that he will not go before the convention without the united support of his State; yet it will be re-called that he said the same thing before the convention of 1880, when Blaine the convention of 1880, when Blain forcibly shared his pie, and cruelly nom inated a local rival. It is a mistake to count Sherman out of the fight, no mat-ter what he says. He will be out of it ter what he says. He will be out of it when the exchanations of the convention cease to make joyous the birth of the party's hero, and no sooner. He has a burning, unquenchable fire within, by whose flame he hopes to be lighted through tortuous ways to the Presidency. His ambition is honorable and he is big whough to justify it. He knows what he wants, and has the candor to ask for it. That is probably because he doesn't see it. If persistent asking for the dispersers may be held to add virtue to his great merit, he deserves well of the dispensers. But flagrant seeking of of the dispensers. But flagrant seeking for the highest office is odious to some people and gets the seeker unpleasantly talked about. It is especially odious to will it is looking more and more like the lightning will strike General Goff for second place if Blaine or Allison is the non-ince. Hawley is about the only soldier politician prominent enough in the East to run with Allison; and he has a record on the tariff and Chinese questions which would make him unavailable. Tariff magwumping will not do in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut; while pro-Chinese sentiments would almost insure defeat on the Pacific slope. I am in a position to know that a considerable sentiment is centering of Goff as an available representative of the soldier element. conceited for him to go into that kind of business. He has a big bunch of them, some from New England, some from North Carolina, others from Virginia and three or four from far-off Kanass, saying nothing of our own State. These letters are wholly voluntary, and were written to see whether he would object to the use of his name for the second place. His answer has uniformly been that he is not a candidate for the Vice Presidency, but as a Republican he is subject to the call of his party. Whatever the talk may amount to, I am glad to hear that he has placed himself in WITH BLAINE OUT OF WAY. ever the talk may amount to, I am glad to hear that he has placed himself in such a sensible position. HIS ENEMIES DOING IT.

One Way of Looking at the Statement Re-NEW YORK, April 11 .- The Tribune's Washington correspondent telegraphs the paper as follows: The prominence given in certain newspapers to a state ent regarding Mr. Blaine, made by Winthrop F. Hawood, late of Europe, but now of Boston, is here Europe, but now of Boston, is here looked upon as an indication of the sorry plight in which the enemies of the Maine statesman find themselves. Unable to attack him openly—now that he is out of public life—they resort to these underhand methods of injuring him, fearing that the almost universal demand of his party, that he should lead it once more in the coming struggle, may yet result in his changing his mind and again becoming a candidate.

an available representative of the soldier element. His re-election as chairman of the Congressional Executive Committee signalizes a considerable advance in his chances, and a good many leading Republicans are talking seriously about his availability. He would be equally available with Blaine or Allison. Living on the crest of the Alleghenies, he is in a position to reach either East or West.

Quite a bulky correspondence has grown up over the subject and the expressions in some letters I understand are calculated to tickle the vanity of a less sensible man than Goff.
